Why should a student major in economics when few graduates actually become professional economists? Job recruiters and graduate schools frequently seek economics majors because economics offers a way of thinking that is clear, concise and rigorous. Economics provides a solid background for many jobs and professions, preparing students for advancement in almost any professional career. The Department of Economics’ mission is “to communicate the relevance of economics through innovative and cooperative teaching, scholarship and service.” The UW-La Crosse undergraduate program is extremely flexible and offers many options to accommodate a wide range of student interests.

Economics credit by examination policy
The Department of Economics awards advance placement and/or credit by examination in ECO 110 Microeconomics and Public Policy (3 cr.) and ECO 120 Global Macroeconomics (3 cr.). Each examination will consist of multiple-choice items. Information about examinations is available through the department chair’s office.

Students in the College of Business Administration must be admitted to business and also complete the college core requirements.
